

I am a truck driver. The information provided by XM is a real benefit to me and the millions of others who need the service of XM instant weather and traffic information to plan ahead. As an example, I cannot get up to the minute weather and traffic information in cities like Dallas while in Mississippi except on XM (Satellite) radio. With 'Distraction Driving' becoming a big issue, ask yourselves, is pushing a preset button more distracting than constantly turning the dial of a radio? In fact, the folks at XM will cut in on the information channels to give any information that may concern the traveling public if it of neccessary importance such as weather or traffic bottlenecks. In those cases, it isn't even neccessary to push even one button. Look at California's proposed new law. Even talking to another person in the car is to be considered a distraction. Do the right thing. Leave it alone. The Government doesn't need to be involved in anything that is not of public access and this is not. It is by paid subscription only
